It is a lie. Read the email--it mentions money.

Rick. You may want to reconsider. You are being conned.

No, I sent you the email because I was concerned that you were not aware of Dad's passing. No idea what you are talking about with the "money". Never entered my mind.

Mom said she called you and wrote you. I still do not know why you wouldn't have seen those things. She did tell me she did not leave a message that our Dad had died, just to call her as it was important.

There is this. It took me several hours and numerous computers to find it. Then, the mail system on that computer was so old I couldn't forward it. I have about 30 years of email. I couldn't find my replies, but I will.

Aug 27, 2011. Today I learned that my father died some 3+ years later. I was never informed--not even a funeral notice.

I have had the same phone number for 27 years, and the same email address too. No one called, to my knowledge. I am certain no one wrote.

This morning I checked once again online as I do. All I found was Ralph K. Pfeiffer, age 93, Stuart, FL.

I am not entirely surprised though. I received one or two flyers from a nursing home over the years. I certainly would have been there if I had known or was invited, but I was summarily and intentionally not included.

Why? Because I know the secrets. I was there. (Whenever allowed, that is.)

I figured the mention of money would get attention.

Fwd: Fwd: Mom and Dad

Thought you would like to know that we have been closing Mom and Dad's house here in North Carolina for the last while... Mom, Aunt Dorothy, and me.

Sorry not to have had you here, but that issue would be between you and our Mom.

Love, Susi

Hi Pete,

I tried to call but your mailbox was full.

This morning Dad was taken by ambulance to the hospital. He could not get up from his chair. I think that this is Alzheimer's related.

He will be at the hospital for three days, then probably on to a skilled nursing facility, then who knows?

Mom will be hard to reach since she does not have a cell phone and cannot hear very well.

As it looks right now, I will be heading to Florida sometime mid-week and will keep you informed.

Love,
Susi
